About the Wesley Club

Wesley Club is a progressive, LGBTQ friendly campus ministry. We are devoted to creating an open and inclusive atmosphere where college-aged people can explore spirituality, engage justice, and journey together.

Wesley's mission is to partner with students as they develop a deeper sense of self in community, a closer relationship with God, and a more active life of justice. As such, this campus ministry fosters critical thinking and spiritual exploration, in an open, accepting community. Our three core values are faith, justice, and community.

Wesley Foundation is an equal opportunity employer.

About Student Project Leaders

The Wesley Club is a student-run community committed to exploring questions of justice and spirituality. Being "student-run" means that student project leaders and employees both have a great deal of say in the coordination and direction of the community, and a corresponding amount of responsibility.

Student Project Leads are contractors, not employees. Nonetheless, the positions offer hands-on experiences and of the project-management and pastoral imagination required in leading a community like the Wesley Club.

Duties and Responsibilities:

Unique to this Position

- Coordinate and execute TEENFEED (held the 2nd Saturday of every even-numbered month), including planning the menu, creating a shopping list.
- Recruit and manage volunteers for these events including social media and other forms of outreach and recruitment
- Collaborate and coordinate with the Advocacy and Activism Student Fellow

Shared by All Team Members

- Assist in planning of Winter and Spring Quarters
- Participate in weekend-long All-Team Retreat (September)
- Participate in all-team meetings twice per quarter meeting

Qualifications

- Applicants must be students at either University of Washington, Seattle or Seattle Pacific University during their service as a fellow.
- Experience and interest in community engagement.
- Ability to create and stay organized as they balance life, school and a multifaceted time-demanding position.
- Ability to be give and receive caring and critical feedback as part of a team.
- A commitment to full inclusion of all people
- A willingness to take risks
- Intellectual capacity and curiosity
- The potential to be a game-changer
- A commitment to the intersection of faith and social justice

Language from Performance Review Process

Wesley Club Team Members are expected to be servant-leaders—people who lead through service, and serve through leadership. Successful candidates will embody this servant-leadership in its five characteristics of Creativity, Collaboration, Nourishment, Flexibility, and Insistency.

Creativity

Finding unique or previously unseen solutions to problems, working well with limited resources, and having an imagination for community, programs, and systems

Collaboration

Working across differences, seeking to hear and be heard, delegating, equipping others, and relying on and showcasing the team's constitutive excellence

Nourishment

Embodying nonanxiety, compassion and empathy, balancing self-care and community-care, feeding and being fed

Flexibility

Embodying patience, grace, and adaptability, responding to the unexpected, filling in for others, asking to be filled in for

Insistency

Embodying diligence and confidence, persisting in thorough work, standing up for self and others, having a work ethic and voice that are both dependable and healthy
